Analogue Photowalk and Film Processing

Using Wakefield as your inspiration, you will experience a guided approach to making photographs and responding (photographically) to your surroundings. Learn how to develop the images you've taken and gaining beginner's knowledge of how to process your own roll of film.

Film Processing

Understand what film processing is all about! Learn how chemicals react inside the developer tub and explore the effects of pushing/pulling during development.

Darkroom Printing

Using an enlarger and chemical processes associated with photography, print from negatives in our darkroom. You'll leave the workshop with your own hand-printed silver gelatin photograph!

Alternative Photography Day

Discover ways of producing photographs with found objects and materials. Using light sensitive paper, you can produce images without the use of chemicals, known as photograms. Chemigrams use chemicals to produce the same effect.

Photograms or Chemigrams

Similar to our alternative photography activity, you can choose to produce prints using the Photogram or Chemigram method. This would typically be a half-day activity.
